Master Of Ceremony Biography
JOHNSON&LAIRD

If you've ever seen those recruitment ads for the police about getting a job with better work stories then spare a thought for Mark Sainsbury's career. Not many people got to go Mt Everest and Antarctica with Sir Edmund Hillary, meet a then unknown state Senator called Obama at the 2004 Democratic National Convention or do a stage tour with Rick Stein cooking and talking across the country.

Journalism has taken Mark to most of the world's trouble spots, Northern Ireland, Bosnia and The Middle East. He was there when Diana was killed and Mandela elected. He spent the last day in office with both Rob Muldoon and David Lange while Geoffrey Palmer's people still bear a grudge that a story he directed destroyed his credibility as PM. (he only persuaded the then PM to join a conga line with Aka Bilk and Kenny Ball).

For the last thirty years Mark has been able to walk among the decision makers and news makers, but still remain connected to the real people who make up this nation.

Journalism for Mark was an accident. After starting a law degree then veering off into driving trolley buses, managing pubs and installing awnings for the rich and famous in California Mark planned to finish his law degree but do journalism to pay for it. The law never had a chance.

He has worked on every major programme at TVNZ since the 80's. He has covered every prime minister since Muldoon and ran the networks political coverage and election coverage over more campaigns than he cares to remember. He was our correspondent in Europe for several years and was considered to have the most famous moustache in New Zealand. He was even immortalized by Disney /Jim Henson as a muppet.

One of six boys his family roots are in Hawkes Bay but he grew up in the big valley: Upper Hutt. He is married to Ramona with 25 year old twins, Hunter and Arabella who thanks to their mothers Samoan/German ancestry take their looks from her side of the family.

Having covered news, plus daily and weekly current affairs for decades Mark was the last host of TVNZ's nightly current affairs shows before the format was changed completely. Mark Sainsbury hosts Morning Talk from 9am-midday on RadioLIVE.

In his time reporting, as a foreign correspondent and political editor he has covered elections in New Zealand, Australia, USA, South Africa, UK. He's done stories that have changed the law and ones that have changed lives and through it all is the underlying fact that he has had so much fun. Life is to be lived and he's crammed more into it than you could possibly imagine.

Mark is still involved in journalism and particularly when it concerns his passion for classic cars. He owns a 1963 Lincoln Continental 4 door convertible, a 1971 Bentley Corniche convertible and a 1968 Norton SS. He is also in demand as an after dinner speaker, an MC and facilitator and undertakes limited commercial work in the area of media analysis and advice.
